Course Overview

This training course equips professionals with the essential knowledge, skills, and attitudes required to manage and lead teams and organizations before, during, and after crises or emergencies. All leaders inevitably face the challenge of guiding their teams through difficult and high-risk situations. Unlike day-to-day leadership, crisis leadership demands faster decision-making, the acceptance of greater risks, and the ability to safeguard the organization, its people, clients, and the public.

This course will feature:

- Exercising leadership and personnel management under emergency and crisis conditions
- Assessing, prioritizing, and managing risks and threats across all crisis phases
- Making timely and effective decisions, including delegation and team involvement
- Collaborating with government authorities, legal bodies, media, and other organizations
- Conducting crisis management and emergency response operations

Course Objectives

By the end of this training course, participants will be able to:

- Understand individual and group psychology, as well as organizational dynamics, in crises and emergencies.
- Apply rational decision-making methods before, during, and after crises.
- Lead teams and organizations effectively under emergency conditions.
- Solve problems and manage crises with confidence and efficiency.
- Recognize and apply ethical principles in crisis and emergency leadership.
